

Web Servant Report August 7, 2011

Northside Area

We finally got Ready Hosting to create me an account. This was Thursday a week ago. I was in the hospital when this account was created and California Steve informed me. To be honest with you I had forgotten why all of us dropped Ready Hosting. I now remember why. They were very rude to me on the phone. I can't think of any NA website that still uses Ready Hosting.

Bottom line is I have the web site built and ready to migrate to WordPress. I don't think I can work with Ready Hosting. California Steve was surprised I hadn't transferred our site to Blue Hosting. This is who most of the NA sites use now. I would like to transfer nascona.org to Blue Hosting and this is a proposal. What would the cost be? We pay for the domain registration which is $10.00 a year and that is all. So 5 years would cost us $50.00 for our domain registration. Our site would become a sub domain under my account which is how hcana.org is set up. You cannot distinguish the difference between a domain or sub domain. There would be no charge for this as I can set up as many sub domains as I want for free. There would be no limit on the size of our site or data transfer. So what happens if something happens to me? Nothing you continue on as usual. The chair will always have the user name and password to our site and my Blue Hosting account as well as my oldest son. Once I get the home page up on WordPress (about 3 hours) it will take about 24 hours for the migration.

In Selfless Service,

Bob T.